

Learn how inclusion criteria guide who can participate in clinical trials

ResearchMatch helps to connect you with researchers recruiting for research studies, but did you know that's just the beginning? Being eligible to participate in a study involves several steps. Learn more about that process by clicking here and reading one of our educational pieces on taking part in a research study, and how inclusion criteria help guide who can take part in a clinical trial.

Meet some of our researchers!

Interested in learning more about the researchers using ResearchMatch to find volunteers for their studies? Meet Dr. Carolyn Baylor from the University of Washington! Click the image below to hear about her research in the field of speech and language pathology.

Collaborations with non-profit Hispanic organizations

In recognition of National Hispanic Heritage Month, ResearchMatch is proud to share a few recent community collaborations!

National Association of Hispanic Nurses

The National Association of Hispanic Nurses (NAHN) is a non-profit organization committed to advancing health in Hispanic communities, and to lead, promote, and advocate for the educational, professional, and leadership opportunities for Hispanic nurses.

The NAHN Phoenix Chapter recently had the opportunity to share information about ResearchMatch at two community events.

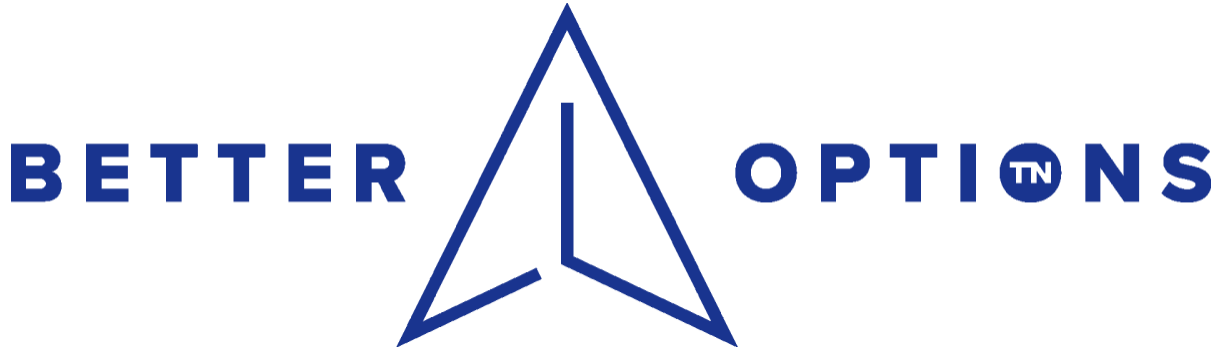

NAHN Phoenix hosted a blood drive and collected 21 units of much-needed blood – enough to positively impact over 63 lives!

NAHN Phoenix also hosted a social mixer called “Healthy Connections” for healthcare professionals, where they raised money for scholarship funds.

Better Options Tennessee

Better Options Tennessee assists those new to the United States with tools necessary for successful acculturation for themselves, their family, and their community. They foster a sense of connection by introducing newcomers to a new culture so they may be successful and engaged community members.

Better Options recently held its annual back-to-school backpack give-away in July 2023, where they distributed backpacks and school supplies to children in the middle Tennessee community, which also included information about taking part in health research through ResearchMatch!
